THE TICKET.

The ticket nominated at Virginia yesterday is one that will be carried in November by majorities Hereby annunces his self as a candidate ranging from 1000 to 1500.

The men composing the Convention were representative nen of Nevada, and they built the ticket to win. On every side their work is being commended and applauded.

It will give more general satisfaction than any State ticket nominated in Nevada for a long time. The head of the ticket is exceptionally strong; and the balance in keeping with it.

SULLIVAN-ACTOR.

John L. Sullivan has made his appearance on the American stage, and for what reason we are unable to state.

One could easily imagine the burly John in the role of Hamlet, and the utterance of the soliloquy to a crowded house. What a pitiable sight he would make of himself as he snorted around like a wounded bear trying to lead the minuet ..

The people of this county thirst for oddities and freaks more than the French people after imported food. The best actor in the world would appear in the eyes of a Sullivan audience as a scrub, and the gate receipts would hardly pay the rent of the theater.

The mere announcement that the slogger would appear as stated has set the Eastern theater-goers in a turmoil of excitement, and his coming West is shouted through the columns of the press at a much lower rate than the regular troups are used to paying. John L. Sullivan owes all his fame to the American papers, without whose assistance he would have been nothing.

In the ring he is a power of muscle, and a magnificent specimen of his sturdy people, but on the stage, before an intelligent audience his movements are certainly uncouth and awkward.

The only act in the play that is adapted to him is a fighting scene where John rushes out from the left wing, glances heavenward, mutters something about justice in all things, and clips the villain a couple under the ear, landing him into the orchestra chairs.

Probably the next character John impersonates will be the Savior in the Passion Play, but he ought to impersonate Jaques, the King's Wrestler, in Rosalind. To this he is adapted, and nothing more.
